His strongest point was in doing just as he was told and doing that with energy and accuracy. So when he was notified from Beverly by Road master Stevens that the section lengths were to be changed and that he was to move his tool house from the westerly end of Salem yard to halfway between mileposts 15 and 16 he started out with the determination to move the house

halfway, no more, no less. To get this halfway point he sta tioned one of his men at milepost 15 and another at milepost 16, and at a signal they started to walk toward each other until they met, and to a point opposite their meeting place the shanty was moved. This method of getting the correct distance did not quite suit Moynahan, especially when he remembered that one of the walkers was taller than the other and the other tripped several times on the way

He carried this in his mind for nearly a year, when he met the engineers measuring through for signals and could make it go. He sewed up one asked them to tell him as they mean-
